An electric toaster besides a sum of money was presented to them. (A fortunate gift as Lawrence deems toast for breakfast an essential.) Lawrence, among his words of thanks, gave his address to the group and an invitation to look them up when in Edmonton. A splendid lunch completed the party.

WAR DEAD HONORED AT REMEMBRANCE SERVICE

The Remembrance Day service held in Keifer's hall on November 11 was quite well attended.

The program opened with "O, Canada." Rev. H. W. Inglis then led in prayer and read a portion of scripture. The hymn "O Valiant Hearts," was sung. Cde. Ralph Congdon read the roll call and the wreath was presented by Cdes. E. Sharkey and Albert Glasgow.

After the Two Minutes Silence Cde. R. Smith sounded the Last Post. Rev. H. W. Inglis repeated Lawrence Binyon's "They shall not grow old." This was followed by the Reveille.

An offering was then taken up for T.B. vets.

The Irma United church choir sang "God's Trumpet is Sounding." Mr. Warnock, of the Gospel Mission, who is a returned vet, read the scripture and offered a prayer before giving the address.

This was followed by another number from the choir, "Bells of Peace Now Ring." The gathering sang "For All the Saints Who From Their Labors Rest."

Mr. Inglis then pronounced the benediction and the service closed with "God Save the King."

P.T.M. PROGRAM AT SHARON

On Sunday evening, November 9, a Pocket Testament Movement program was held in Sharon church. A very fine program under the leadership of Mrs. B. Gulbraa was presented. A beautiful poster served as the background. Appropriate solos and duets, and readings were given as well as the topic "The Bible for me and the Bible for others."

THE VEIN proves rich, a shaft is sunk, and a new mining town springs into life. The main street takes form. Commercial buildings rise.

When such a development occurs, the services of a bank are needed—to handle payrolls, to keep savings accounts and, as the town grows, to furnish bank credit for the needs of the community.

This is a basic pattern in Canada's development. And part of it is the local bank manager, providing those financial services which help Canadian men and women to win the rewards of modern enterprise and modern living.

THIS IS ONE INSTANCE OF how Canada's 3,200 branch banks play their part in the daily life and work of Canadians.

Old Cook Book Comes To Light On Church Anniversary

An old cook book has been handed in to the Times office. This book bears the title "The Good Luck Cook Book," and was published by the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church, Irma, in 1913.

This little book is full of recipes by various local ladies and contains names as familiar to us as Mrs. A. A. Fischer, Mrs. Ross Eaton, Mr. T. Shaw, Mary Elliott, etc. Between these reliable directions for cookery are sandwiched little words of wisdom such as "A dead fish can float down stream, but it takes a live one to swim up." Also little scraps of poetry and advertising. All this bound together in a yellow cover bearing a house-shoe and a four-leaf clover could be yours for the sum of 35 cents.

As this week sees the 37th anniversary of the Irma United church we are publishing a recipe from this old book by Mrs. Boothroyd, who, we are told, was the first lady of the manse in Irma.

An embargo has been declared on rail shipments of oats and barley to Eastern Canada. The purpose thereof is to utilize lake shipping and make more box cars available for carrying grain from the prairies to the terminals.

To Combat Drought

PRAIRIE WHEAT FARMING has always been regarded as a precarious undertaking, for each year the crop is menaced by many factors which are beyond the control of the farmer. No matter how carefully he prepares the land and sows the seed, drought, hail, rust, frost, insects and other hazards threaten the results of the year's work, and he cannot be sure of success until the harvest is over. It is true that experience, and agricultural research have helped materially to lessen some of these dangers which yearly threaten the Western wheat crop. Early-maturing varieties of wheat have been developed to offset the ravages of frost and rust resisting-wheat has helped to eliminate that hazard. Programmes of insect extermination and control have cut down on the amount of wheat damaged in that way.

A Great Enemy In Some Areas

Conserving moisture through proper methods of cultivation, and irrigation have helped materially to overcome the threat of drought which has been the greatest enemy of farmers in some sections of the West. It has now been reported that experiments are being carried on at the Dominion experimental farm at Swift Current, Saskatchewan, which may help to further cut down crop losses due to lack of moisture. Tests made under the supervision of Dr. J. L. Doughty, chief of the farm's soil laboratory, are expected to yield information which may help the farmer to determine whether there is enough moisture in the soil to assure him of a profitable crop. Through this knowledge, large sums, annually spent on seed sowed in areas where there is little hope of a successful crop, may be saved.

Forecasts To Help Farmers

The soil scientists at Swift Current have found that in the brown-soil zone of Saskatchewan, which makes up the southwest corner of the province, the average rainfall is never sufficient for even a fair crop, and part of the necessary moisture must be supplied from the soil. By measuring the amount of moisture in the soil in the spring, and again after harvest, it is hoped that eventually a method may be worked out by which the yield of any piece of land may be accurately predicted. Careful use of the land, from the point of view of moisture conservation will be an important factor in overcoming drought in those areas where the average rainfall is not sufficient to produce a good crop. It is expected that it will be ten years before the experiments now being carried on will be completed, but it is encouraging to know that active measures are being taken to overcome the lack of rain, which is one of the greatest problems facing many Western farmers.

India Riots Create World Kid Shortage

MONTREAL—If you are not finding many kid shoes in the stores these days, you can blame it on the continuing violence in the new twin dominions of India and Pakistan. Kid is imported from India, but riots and consequent disruption of communications have prevented collection of the precious skins. Tanners and shoe manufacturers on this side, eagerly awaiting consignments, say that even skins already at the docks cannot be shipped due to a shortage of stevedores. In the Punjab, many Moslems, who for years have controlled the kidskin industry, have been forced to flee. Only Moslems can work in slaughterhouses, since Hindus are forbidden by their religion. India, with more livestock than any other country in the world, is also the world's chief supplier of goat and kid skins.

THE TILLERS

FUNNY And OTHERWISE

A familiar "man about the courthouse" was being discussed. "He used to be powerfully energetic," one old observer said. "For years he chased around like mad trying to get a political job." "What does he do now?" someone asked. "Nothing. He got the job."

"But, madam, I'm afraid you're making a mistake. I am a doctor, certainly, but I'm a doctor of music."

"I know that," replied the old lady, "and that's why I came to you. I've a terrible singing in my ears."

On going into the cow shed one morning, the farmer was greatly surprised to find his new hand, a town girl who had previously been employed in a factory, giving one of the cows a drink of milk from her pail.

"What are you doing that for?" he asked.

"Well," explained the girl, "the milk looked so thin to me, I thought I'd better put it through the process again."

On a radio quiz program, the assistant in the balcony announced the next contestant: "I have a paratrooper, sir."

"Here's the question for you, soldier," said the quizmaster. "How many successful jumps did a paratrooper have to make before he graduated?"

Came this immediate and logical answer: "All of 'em."

An English bride of a few weeks noticed that her husband was depressed.

"Gerald, dearest," she said, "I know something is troubling you, and I want you to tell me what it is; your worries are not your worries now, they are our worries."

"Oh, very well," he said. "We've just had a letter from a girl in Manchester, and she's suing us for breach of promise."

"I want," said the house-hunter, "a small house in an isolated position at least five miles from any other house."

"I see," said the house agent, with an understanding smile. "You want to practise the simple life."

"No," answered the house-hunter. "I want to practise the trombone."

"I won't live with you any more! I'm going straight off to my mother and I'm never coming back! What are you doing with the telephone?"

"I thought I'd find out about a train for you."

On a crowded bus, a passenger apologetically handed the conductor a ten-shilling note, saying, "I'm afraid I haven't any coppers."

"Don't worry," the conductor assured him grimly. "In a minute you'll have 11s."

Scholarships To Be Provided By Beaver Club

Profits Of Operation Put To Good Use

LONDON—A sum of $120,000, left after the famous wartime Beaver Club closed, will provide scholarships at British Universities for Canadian ex-servicemen and their sons.

The first scholarship, equal in value to the Rhodes scholarships which are worth $2,000 for three years, has been taken by Christopher Young, whose father Norman Young, headmaster of Ravenscroft school in Winnipeg, was killed at Dieppe.

The fund will provide 15 or 20 scholarships in the next few years as well as adding $16,000 to supplement grants made by the Canadian Department of Veterans Affairs to ex-servicemen studying in Europe.

The fund also has donated $2,000 to the British Victory Club and the same amount to the Beaver Club voluntary association, made up of workmen who worked in the Beaver Club during the war.

The Club was founded in London under the chairmanship of Vincent Massey, former Canadian High Commissioner in London; Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, War-time Commander of the First Canadian Army; H. R. Mitchell, Secretary of the Rhodes Trust; and the heads of the Universities of McGill and Toronto.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY

DUMB DORA

By NICHOLAS KUSHTA

DORA's my girl and I guess I can call her dumb, but she's my girl and nobody but me can call her dumb. She's a brunette and a cute little thing, all cuddly and nice and I want to marry her. I come out of the Army all set to get hitched, but she says no, I ain't man enough for her.

Her brother, Dick, is the model for the kind of man she wants. Well, I'm only a truck driver and not much up on the brains department but Dick ain't half as smart as I am. He's just a big wise guy with a build like Charles Atlas. Day and night he goes around exercising. But what're muscles. What are they gonna get you in the end?

"Dora," I says to her, "I been out of the Army a month now and every minute of the eighteen months I been overseas, I've been thinking of coming back and marryin' you right off. You say no." And Dora says, "I like you Joe, but I don't know if I'll be happy with you. You see, Joe, my Pops ran a gymnasium and he was really muscled. Dick is just the same way. I'm so I expect it of a man, Joe, big muscles I mean."

I protested, "I got muscles, Dora. Look!" And I flexed my arm for her and my muscle popped up. "Foh!" Dora says, "I can get a muscle like that without trying."

What can a guy do with a dame like that? I finally propositioned her, "Listen, kid, if I get to show you I'm as manly a man as Dick will you marry me?" She looks at me for a long time. "Sure," she says, "I like you, Joe. I like you a lot, but I wanta marry you without any doubt in my mind. I don't want no doubts, Joe, cause I want to be happy when I'm married. You get married for such a long time."

Now I got me a problem. I don't know how these kind of things happen to me. In the Army I didn't like you a lot, but I wanta marry you without any doubt in my mind. I don't want no doubts, Joe, cause I want to be happy when I'm married. You get married for such a long time."

Well, the first idea I got doesn't work out too well. I ask Dora and Dick to go out to the beach. I'm a pretty good swimmer and something might happen. A kid might be drowning and I'd save him. You can't tell, and it's worth a try.

We drive out in my car, a nice little sedan, brand new because my truck driving gives me connections. That don't impress Dora. We turn putting on our suits in the car and when I see Dora I get eyes for no one else. Boy, my problem sure has to be solved! And I see Dick. But when I size me up next to Dick I see it's a mistake to come out to the beach. This is my first time out and my skin is all white and I gotta admit, I look fabby. Dick's got a physique I would have admired if he weren't my problem. Nice and tanned with a chest like a barrel and hips like he had a corset, but I can see he hasn't got one. 'Cause his trunks fit him like even they were tailored made. I don't know, things can get difficult even for me.

The next brain wave I get is when I go to the gym with Dick. He fights a little and exercises with the barbells, lifting them over his head like nothing. I went over to the boxing ring. The gym's got a weekly card and some punks are sparring with balloon gloves, trying to get a place on the card. I watch them for a while and before I know it I'm hollering bits of advice to one of the kids.

"Say, why don't you go into the ring," some guy suggests, and I'm in a pair of trunks sparring away. I don't much more about fighting but what I learned from common sense. Common sense means a lot in the ring, though, and pretty soon I'm actually enjoying it up there. I collected a nice crowd.

So I'm signed for the Saturday night card. I figured it's okay because I can get Dora there, and she'll see me knock out my opponent and we can get married. As simple as that. But what I ain't figured on is that they put Dick up to fight against me. Now, suppose I knock out Dick, how's a girl gonna marry a guy who knocks out her brother? And what was more than likely Dick would knock me out and she wouldn't marry me 'cause I wasn't man enough. I got to take my chances and Dick's got to get it, that's all. Dora's sitting at the ring side. Before the fight she said, "May the best man win," and her lips trembled and her eyelids fluttered. I wanted to walk out, but it was too late, and she wants both of us to win!

In the first round, I bopped Dick hard. He's pretty muscle bound and can't move fast. I hear Dora in the first row hollering at me, "You be a hook. Crook. Double-croaker." And those aren't nice things to say. "Hit 'em hard, Dick. Knock him out!" I look in her direction and Dick hits me with a terrible punch. I fall down but wait until the count of nine so I can get rested a little. All this time I'm looking at Dora and she's hollering, "Ain't you Dick, ain't you?" And she's waving her hands, smiles all over her face.

This is too much, even for me. I don't care for nothin' now, get up from the floor, feeling disgusted, disgraced, and mad. Some driver friends are betting pretty heavy on me. I had been thinking of letting Dick walk away with the fight when I saw Dora wanted him to win, but not now! Nuts to these fickle dames!

I look at Dick's chin and let him have it. Dick crumples. I win. I walk to the dressing room, shower and dress. I'm in a terrible mood because I feel I lost even though I won, but Dora ought to be more reasonable.

"Congratulations!" someone says, as I'm walking out. It's Dora. "My hunk of man." She melts in my arms and I kiss her good. Oh boy! This plan has worked.

Etiquette Notes Of Three Centuries Ago

Hannah Woolley who was the Emily Post of her day, passed out some pertinent advice to the belles when she wrote in the Gentlewoman's Companion about 1659:

"Close your lips when you eat and do not smack like a pig." "Discover not by any careless gesture your angry appetite, nor fix your eyes too greedily upon the meat before you."

"Fill not your mouth so full that your cheeks shall swell like Scotch bagpipes."

"It is very uncomely to drink so large a draught that your breath is almost gone and you are forced to blow strongly to recover yourself."

Veteran's Idea Is Meeting With Great Success

Canadian Artists Have Been Provided With Fine Cultural Centre

(By Kay Rex, Canadian Press Writer)

OTTAWA.—An ancient house in the heart of Ottawa's business section shelters what may some day become one of the cultural showplaces of the capital.

Devoted to the work of Canadian painters, "The Gallery" is another venture of one of Canada's veterans, and one which not only is paying off in cash, but also liberally in praise from the Dominion's artists and art-lovers.

Founded less than a year ago, the gallery was the dream of Leo Heaps—that same Capt. Heaps from Winnipeg, who during the war achieved fame for his exploits as a paratrooper, and later with the Dutch underground, experiences of which he recorded in his book "Escape from Amsterdam."

In Ottawa he recognized the need for a centre where people could indulge in their particular hobbies. And in Canada he realized the necessity of awakening the public to appreciation of the work of its own artists.

Both these problems Heaps is tackling with the gallery. Aside from holding art exhibitions, he already has plans to conduct classes this fall in such hobbies as woodworking and leathercraft for interested Ottawans.

But the main purpose of this centre is to interest more persons in bringing Canadian art right into their homes.

Working with the Federation of Canadian Artists, the gallery is getting the public to buy prints of Canadian paintings, many thousands of which already have been sold.

And for the man with a small income it's as easy for him to buy a painting as it is to invest in a car or a refrigerator; because the gallery sells on credit.

The gallery salons often are devoted to "one man" shows of lesser known artists. Children's art also is being given a place. One exhibition of young artists ranging in age from five to 11, already has been held. Others are planned. It's all part of Heaps' plan of interesting Ottawans in what children are doing in schools and various art circles, and in maintaining the principle upon which the gallery was founded: "To bring to Ottawa a new interest in painting."

Says Weekly Papers Should Raise Prices

EDMONTON.—At the annual convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association, Alberta Division, held at Edmonton, President Clive B. Nesbitt in his report at the opening session called for raise in prices of weekly papers. He said: "Our charges are much too reasonable, the cost must go up to keep pace with the rising prices of materials and labor. Standard of our weekly publications is high, and to continue with a weekly publication, and make certain we don't go in the red, we must raise prices. We have tried to see that inflation did not occur, but with costs and conditions the way they are, the only solution is higher prices of weekly publications."

C. A. Clark, secretary, in his report stated that a full time secretary-manager should be employed to do all the work necessary. He said there was far too much work for a part time job. "Either the work of the association must be half done or the secretary's own job must be half done. There is certainly enough work to warrant hiring a secretary-manager to promote the weekly newspapers."

ORIGIN OF SAYING

The saying that a man "is worth his weight in gold" is said to stem from the report that King Solomon was paid in this manner once a year for ruling Jerusalem.

FIRST TELESCOPE WAS INSPIRED BY A TOY

Galileo, contrary to popular opinion, did not invent the telescope. He was the first to use the instrument for astronomical purposes, however, and made many improvements. But the first telescope actually was made in the shop of a Dutch lens maker, Hans Lippershey, and, curiously, was inspired by a toy made by an unknown boy apprentice.

"Trade Marks Tell"

At this time much is said about the dollar shortage in Britain. Many feel we have no surplus here, but those of us who will remember the hungry 30's have to admit there are more dollars in circulation now than ever before.

Nevertheless they should be spent wisely, and be made to go as far as possible. The best way to accomplish that end is to get best value for your dollar.

That's where quality enters the picture. Don't sacrifice quality for a few cents. Make your purchases from brands which are put on the markets by reputable firms. Never forget "Trade Marks Tell," then examine ours.
